L'obra

La facilitat amb què Agustí Borgunyó tracta l'orquestra simfònica és fruit dels centenars de partitures que va compondre i arranjar per a grans formacions orquestrals en la seva vida professional als Estats Units. Abans dels anys 30 ja havia estat director artístic de diferents orquestres per a les que havia compondre tot tipus d'obres, però a partir de 1934 va treballar per a Alfred Wallenstein —que posteriorment seria director de l'Orquestra Filharmònica de Los Angeles— qui li va encomanar obres d'estil hispànic que tant de moda s'havien posat a partir dels èxits internacionals de Manuel de Falla. En aquest període, i amb aquesta finalitat, Borgunyó va compondre la Suite per a viola, que inclou un moviment titulat Gitanerías, i altres obres lliures de clar regust hispànic com la Danza ibérica, el Nocturno sevillano o la Suite ibérica. Per al mateix director, anys més tard, Borgunyó va compondre una suite sobre temes catalans titulada L'aplec, les quals formen part del catàleg de Clivis Publicacions.

El Nocturno sevillano és un fresc simfònic en el que apareixen tots els tòpics musicals de la capital andalusa. S'inicia amb un lament en veu de fagot sobre un redoble en pianíssim de les timbales que crea l'ambient de capvespre que s'anuncia el títol. Els melismes propis de la música d'arrel àrab són ben presents i el rasgueig de la guitarra s'intueix a partir dels arpegiats de l'arpa i del piano que adquireixen rellevància de solistes en alguns moments de l'obra. De les diferents seccions de l'obra, algunes més calmades i altres més rítmiques, en destaca un fragment a ritme de fandanguillo i una cadenza de flauta sobre els arpegis de l'arpa. L'obra es clou amb l'aire de saeta que ha recorregut tota l'obra, aquesta vegada en veu d'un violoncel que va perdent-se en la nit sevillana.

La obra

La facilidad con que Agustí Borgunyó trata la orquesta sinfónica es fruto de los centenares de partituras que compuso y arregló para grandes formaciones orquestales durante su vida profesional en Estados Unidos. Antes de los años 30 del pasado siglo ya había ejercido como director artístico de diferentes orquestas para las que había compuesto todo tipo de obras, pero a partir de 1934 trabajó para Alfred Wallenstein —que posteriormente sería director de la orquesta Filarmónica de Los Angeles— quien le encomendó obras de estilo hispánico que se habían puesto de moda a partir de los éxitos internacionales de Manuel de Falla. En este periodo, y con esta finalidad, Borgunyó compuso la Suite para viola, que incluye un movimiento titulado Gitanerías, y otras obras libres de claro regusto hispánico como la Danza ibérica, el Nocturno sevillano o la Suite ibérica. Para el mismo director, años más tarde, Borgunyó compuso una suite sobre temas catalanes titulada L'aplec, las cuales forman parte del catálogo de Clivis Publicacions.

Nocturno sevillano es un fresco sinfónico donde aparecen todos los tópicos musicales de la capital andaluza. Se inicia con un lamento en la voz del fagot sobre un redoble en pianíssimo de los timbales que recrea el ambiente de atardecer que se anuncia en el título. Los melismos propios de la música de raíz árabe están presentes y el rasgueo de la guitarra se intuye a partir de los arpegiados del harpa y del piano que adquieren relevancia de solistas en algunos momentos de la obra. De las diferentes secciones de la obra, algunas mas calmadas y otras más rítmicas, destacamos un fragmento a ritmo de fandanguillo y una cadenza de flauta sobre los arpegios del harpa. La obra concluye con el aire de saeta que ha recorrido toda la obra, esta vez en la voz de un violonchelo que va perdiéndose en la noche sevillana.

The work

The way in which Agustí Borgunyó is easily able to handle symphony orchestras is the result of the hundreds of scores he composed and arranged for large orchestras during his professional career in the United States. Before the 1930s, he had already been the artistic director of the different orchestras which he composed all manner of works for. From 1934 onwards however, he worked for Alfred Wallenstein (who would later be the director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra) who asked him to compose pieces with the Hispanic flavour that had become so popular following the international success of Manuel de Falla. During that period and with this objective, Borgunyó composed the Suite per a viola, which included a movement entitled Gitanerías, and other works with a clearly Hispanic air, such as Danza ibérica, Nocturno sevillano or the Suite ibérica. Years later, Borgunyó himself composed a suite with a Catalan flavour entitled L'aplec, which are included in the Clivis Publicacions catalogue.

Nocturno sevillano (Sevillian nocturne) is a symphonic piece with music that has clear roots in Seville. The piece starts with a lament by the bassoon and a pianissimo rolling of the kettle drum to create the twilight atmosphere suggested in the title. The melisma typical of Arabic-inspired music is ever-present, and the sound of the guitar is anticipated in the arpeggios of the harp and piano, which take on soloist parts at certain points of the work. Within the different parts of the work, some calm and others more rhythmical, a fragment can be heard in the style of the fandanguillo and the cadence of a flute can be heard above the arpeggios of the harp. The work concludes with a saeta that is repeated throughout the piece, but this time played by a cello that fades away into the Andalusian night.

Detailed description: The musical score consists of two systems of music. System 1 (Measures 1-7) features woodwind entries (Flutes, Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon) with dynamic markings like pp and p. It also includes brass entries (Horns, Trombones) and timpani. System 2 (Measures 8-14) features the harp and piano. The piano part includes a section with sixteenth-note chords. The strings (Violins, Violas, Cellos) enter in System 3 (Measures 15-21) with eighth-note patterns. The score is written in common time, with some measures featuring a 3/4 time signature.
